Georgina's alleged stalker arrested

QUEENS. A pizzeria worker who lives in Ridgewood, Queens, was arrested for allegedly cyberstalking Mayor Michael Bloomberg's daughter, Georgina, according to reports.

Salvatore Di Bartolo, 48, sent e-mails, text messages and even a Facebook post declaring his love for 28-year-old Georgina.

"Happy passover mike. How is Giorgina doing?" he posted on the mayor's Facebook wall.

Di Bartolo had been warned to stay away from Georgina, according to the Daily News, but "he did not care" because they "were going to be married."

QUEENS. A Queens man was released from jail this summer after spending five years behind bars on murder charges he was later cleared of. Ryan Dufort was just 15 and a sophomore at Bayside High School when he was accused of killing someone in a fight that occurred inside a karaoke club. He maintained his innocence the entire time, telling cops he left the club while the fight was still going on, but was found guilty anyway. His case appears to have been mishandled by law enforcement, according to a Daily News report.

100 NYCers bitten by rats each year

- Health Dept. reports rats and mice bite people in all five boroughs
- The wounds can cause diseases ranging from tetanus to rat bite fever

Metro exclusive

See that piece of slimy trash the subway rat is chewing? You could be next.

Rodents bite about 100 New Yorkers each year, according to city Health Department statistics.

In 2010, rats chewed on 86 New Yorkers, and so far this year, 29 people reported getting their skin pierced by a rodent's sharp teeth.

The Health Department records bites from people reporting it on their website, and from emergency room doctors. But many more bite horror stories may go unreported.

Some of the bites come from mice, the Health Department noted. In 2010, 34 of the total bites came from mice, often snapping at people while caught in traps.

But rats have been known to sink their teeth into straphangers riding the subway — or even gnaw on New Yorkers in their homes.

Jimmy Tallman of Magic Exterminating said he was called to a Bronx apartment where rats attacked a child.

"They were getting into a crib and they bit on a baby's toes," he said. Rats sometimes climb right into a baby's crib and suck milk out of bottles, he said.

One hundred twenty-one people in New York City were bitten by rats in 2008, but last year that number dropped to 86.

"You put a rat in a situation where it has to bite you, if it's starving or it's really hungry, you'll get those bites."

MICHAEL MORALES, EXTERMINATOR

In 2005, a 3-year-old girl in the Bronx was chomped on the back when a rat crawled through a shower tile, according to reports.

Another time, in Long Island, a rat nosed into a parrot's cage and ate the bird, Tallman said.

"They're just attracted to the food, and gnaw on a human by accident, for the most part," said his exterminator partner Michael Morales.

If you are bitten by a rat or a mouse, the Health Department recommends immediate medical attention. Bacteria from a rat's teeth can cause anything from tetanus to rat bite fever, which can be fatal.

She loves her 13 rodents

One woman says rats get a bad rap. Queens resident Tara Delahoz, 29, says the 13 rats she raises and breeds in her home would never bite. "They're very docile creatures," she says. Rats are "social by nature," she says, and she ensures they do not get biting habits by nurturing them from birth. She began collecting pet rats at 14. "I saw somebody with a pet rat. The rat looked so docile and so content to sit on the owner's shoulder." METRO/AB

Rat bite health risks

Rat bite fever is rare, but can be caught from infected rodents. It causes fever and a rash about three days after a bite, and can be fatal in extreme cases. Leptospirosis, a bacteria infection from rodents that causes fever and vomiting, is reported about one to three times each year in the city, according to the Health Department. Plague has not been reported from a New York rat, but two cases were recorded last year by a couple visiting from New Mexico.

► The pedestrian plaza on Ninth Ave. and 13th Street will be getting a makeover this fall.

Some want plaza art installations nipped in the bud

A titillating installation by the Department of Transportation in the Meatpacking District has some people all hot and bothered.

Since 2008, six Ninth Avenue pedestrian plazas installed by the DOT have been bordered with concrete art installations, some of which have the distinct spherical shape of a woman's bosom.

"They're the breasts. They just sit out there and do nothing," said Matt DeMatt, owner of the Gaslight Lounge on Ninth Avenue, to the New York Post.

DeMatt, along with the Meatpacking District Improvement Association, is championing a $500,000 redesign of the buxom-looking plaza this fall.

Some locals don't mind the busty sculptures and were shocked by what they called the prudishness of business owners.

"The Standard hotel is notorious for naked people," said Greenpoint resident Tila Johnson, 27, who works in retail nearby. "I don't think they're offensive."

"They're a little breast-lesque, that's for sure," admitted Cory Miller, 29, a manager at a burger joint on Ninth Ave.

While he wasn't convinced that the concrete globes were too revealing, he did admit that, on the whole, the plazas could certainly use "a lift."

Thieves target LES

LOWER EAST SIDE. Police are looking for two robbers who are targeting late-night revelers and others on the Lower East Side. The duo has committed four robberies so far, police say, most recently on Wednesday when they allegedly threatened a 64-year-old man with a handgun and stole his wallet just before 11 p.m. at 250

Clinton St. Before that, they robbed a couple at the corner of Rivington and Ridge streets at 2:30 a.m., police said, again brandishing a gun and stealing the couple's money, cell phones and credit cards. They are also accused of stealing an MP3 player from a 26-year-old man on Mott Street — and, in July, following a 30-year-old man into his building before stealing his keys, money and phone. ● METRO/CB

Police: Puny perv attacks 12th victim

Massive toll hike looms across the Hudson River

It may soon be much more expensive for those in New Jersey to get into the city, if the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey gets its way.

The bistate authority is planning massive fare and toll hikes, sometimes more than 50 percent increases, on the PATH, the Lincoln and Holland tunnels, the George Washington Bridge and other bridges, according to a doomsday plan unveiled Friday.

And the most pain will be felt by drivers who pay cash: Cash tolls getting into the city could go as high as $15.

If the proposal is approved, one of the proposed hikes, a $4 increase for E-ZPass customers, could go into effect as early as September.

The fare hike would be the Port Authority's first increase since 2008. According to the proposal,

Planned hikes

- $4 increase for E-ZPass drivers during peak hours: Currently $8, will go up to $12.
- $7 increase for drivers who pay cash: Currently $8, will go up to $15.
- $1 increase on a single-fare PATH ticket: Currently $1.75, would be raised to $2.75 a ride.
- $35 increase for a monthly unlimited PATH card: Currently $54 a month, would raise to $89, a 65 percent increase.

the bridge and tunnel tolls would again be raised in 2014 by an additional $2.

"And if the fiscal position of the United States deteriorates further, or if the political gridlock becomes more entrenched, then that could lead to a downgrade. The outlook indicates at least a one in three chance of a downgrade over that period."

45K Verizon workers go on strike

Almost half the workers in Verizon Communications wireline telecommunications business went on strike yesterday as negotiations for a new labor contract failed.

The strike involves 45,000 workers. It's the first walk-out that Verizon, one of the two big U.S. telephone network operators, has faced since 2000 — when about 80,000 workers went on strike for about three weeks.

Verizon and two unions — The Communications Workers of America and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers — had been in talks since late June but were still far

Worst London riots in years

LONDON. London braced yesterday for more violence after some of the worst riots in the British capital for years which politicians and police blamed on criminal thugs but residents attrib-

Rioters throwing petrol bombs rampaged overnight through the deprived district of Tottenham in north London, setting police patrol cars, buildings and a double-decker bus on fire.

"There are Twitter conversations that people are being asked to meet again down in Tottenham, so we are all concerned — but clearly we will be much better prepared this evening," Richard Barnes, London's Deputy Mayor, told BBC TV. REUTERS

Inquiry into airstrike deaths

KABUL. Afghan President Hamid Karzai ordered an investigation yesterday into a NATO air strike that killed eight civilians, adding more fuel to an already contentious issue between Kabul and foreign forces. Violence is at its worst in Afghanistan since U.S.-backed Afghan forces toppled the Taliban government in late 2001. While there have been high levels of foreign troop deaths, Afghan civilians have borne the brunt of the conflict.

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers

Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily saleable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

Faulty gene linked to ovarian cancer

► Testing for RAD51D gene should be available in a few years ► Development of new drugs could quicken

Women who carry a faulty copy of a gene called RAD51D have an almost one-in-11 chance of developing ovarian cancer, scientists said yesterday in a finding they called the most significant ovarian cancer gene discovery for more than 10 years.

Tests to identify those at the highest risk are expected to be available within a few years, according to Cancer Research U.K. This may lead some women to decide to have their ovaries removed in order to beat the disease.

The finding should also speed the search for new drugs.

Laboratory experiments

230K

Estimated number of women worldwide that are diagnosed with ovarian cancer each year already suggest that cells with faulty RAD51D are sensitive to PARP inhibitors — a new class of drugs designed to target cancers caused by faults in two known breast and ovarian cancer genes, BRCA1 and BRCA2.

Several large drugmakers, including Abbott, Merck, Pfizer, Sanofi-Aventis and AstraZeneca, are developing PARP inhibitors, which work by blocking DNA repair mechanisms in cancer cells, stalling the cell cycle and leading to cell death.

Data released in May showed that one of these, AstraZeneca's olaparib, was able to slow the progression of ovarian cancer in a midstage clinical trial.

For the latest study, researchers from Britain's Institute of Cancer Research compared the DNA of women from 911 families with ovarian and breast cancer to DNA from a control group of more than 10,000 people from the general population.

ABC plans to divorce 'Housewives'

ABC yesterday said it is ending "Desperate Housewives" when the current, eighth season wraps up in 2012, sending the popular ladies of Wisteria Lane packing into TV history. ABC made the announcement to television critics, calling it an "iconic show" for the network. The show was hugely popular after it first began airing in 2004, winning numerous awards and gaining audiences overseas. But as with all TV shows, its popularity has waned as the show has aged. Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip t @dorothyatmetro m dorothy.robinson@metro.us

She's having a ball

Susan Sarandon's love of all things ping-pong is well-documented (she's an investor at SPiN, a ping-pong parlor located in New York's Flatiron district). But she still claims she's an average player and not cut-throat at all — a fact that really hit home during a recent trip to China.

"Not at all," she said when asked if she were a competitive player. "I just played recently in China, and it was the most traumatizing thing. First of all, I had no idea what was going on. Second of all, I'm not competitive. I'm shy."

Is it pingpong that keeps the svelte 64-year-old in such great shape? Maybe! "It's really good exercise, it's great for the brain, it relieves stress," she told Metro on Friday while at an event with Grey Goose and SPiN in East Hampton. "They've been doing tests on Alzheimer's and really recommend [that patients] practice to work

The J. Lo divorce is getting ugly

The "amicable" part of Jennifer Lopez and Marc Anthony's split is apparently done, as the inevitable custody battle has reportedly gotten ten under way with Lopez looking for sole custody of their twins, according to Us Weekly. "They are always with their mom. Jennifer lights up around her kids. She's incredible, balancing work and being a good mom," a source says.

The youth shall inherit the Twitter

Well, here's something that is going to make you feel old: The top actresses ranked by their Klout score (a measure of how much online influence people have) are Demi Lovato, Selena Gomez, Ariana Grande, Miley Cyrus and Bella Thorne. As the Huffington Post points out, the average age of these tweeters is a ripe 17. The HuffPo then had Ad.ly, a company that pays celebrities to tweet on behalf of brands, compile a second list of the most influential tweeters when it comes to people buying what they mention. The winner? Lindsay Lohan.

Talking points

Clooney's wrestling lady

George Clooney is reportedly rebounding from Elisabetta Canalis with ex-wrestler Stacy Keibler, according to Us Weekly. "It's more than just a fling," a source says of the pair, who have known each other for about four years. "They're basically exclusive at this point. They like each other's sense of humor. Obviously they're both physically attracted to one another." But the new couple apparently plans to keep things private when it comes to their relationship: "I don't see her hitting any of the red carpets with him," the source adds.

Jolie is 'bored' with England

Angelina Jolie is reportedly so bored in England while Brad Pitt films "World War Z" that she's considering packing up the kids and heading back to the U.S. before he's finished, according to Us Weekly. "She's not pleased being at home while he's on set," the source says. "These are the longest hours he's spent on a set in a while, so it's just her and the kids with not much to do." While Jolie has been giving life in London a go, including taking son Mad and her older children to see "Wicked" over the weekend for his birthday, it's unclear how much longer she'll be interested in sticking around.

Winehouse home to be rehab center

Amy Winehouse's family is reportedly planning to turn her $4 million north London home into a rehab center and the offices of the Amy Winehouse Foundation, according to the Sun. "They don't want to rent it out, and if they sold it they think it could attract the wrong kind of buyer as it was where Amy passed away," a source says. "Everyone is united in making it a success — the label, her family, friends and management. [Her father] Mitch has big plans and needs a nice environment where employees will be able to carry out their work properly."

'Apes' prequel conquers the box office

Sci-fi thriller "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" reigned at the weekend box office with $54 million in ticket sales at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to studio estimates released yesterday.

Surprise summer hit "The Smurfs" finished second with $21 million domestically over three days, followed by sci-fi Western "Cowboys & Aliens" with $15.7 million.

New body-switching comedy "The Change-Up" finished fourth with $13.5 million, at the low end of forecasts. The film, starring Jason Bateman and Ryan Reynolds, was widely panned for its formulaic plot and raunchy humor.

"Rise of the Planet of the Apes" was released by 20th Century Fox, a unit of News Corp. Starring James Franco, Freida Pinto and Andy Serkis, the film is set in modern-day San Francisco at a medical research facility that tests Alzheimer's medications on apes.

"The Change-Up" and "Cowboys & Aliens" were distributed by Universal Studios. Columbia Pictures released "The Smurfs." REUTERS/METRO

Not your average superhero

▶ Just four episodes in, Azita Ghanizada is already garnering a fan base on the new 'super abilities' show 'Alphas' ▶ Catch her tonight with her idol, Lindsay Wagner

Afghan-American actress Azita Ghanizada has been a TV lover all her life — and in fact says it's how she learned English. So the success of her new Syfy series, "Alphas," has been especially rewarding for her. In the series, Ghanizada plays Rachel, a member of a team of individuals with special abilities. Metro caught up with Ghanizada to talk about what's in store for her character and what it was like working with one of her own heroes.

You're filming the finale now. What can you tell us about it without spoiling too much? What's happened since the start of the season is that you've gotten to know the characters, and the audience got to learn a little bit about the Alphas phenomenon — you know, not mutants, not superheroes, but humans with brain anomalies. You've got these people that are unique working for a government agency and doing what they think is right, but the stories com-

▶ "Alphas" airs Monday night at 10 on Syfy.

Q&A: Meeting

her own hero

In tonight's episode, you get to work with guest-star Lindsay Wagner.

▶ I got to talk at length with her about what it was like to be a female TV star in the '70s on "The Bionic Woman" and breaking that ground, and she was just so cool. And then when we're shooting, I went to do my super-hearing, and she just smirked a little bit. She's like, "I used to be you." I was like, "Oh my God, right!" — I mean, way cooler. She was a badass. Rachel's growing into that. But what an iconic moment for me for someone who really shifted television for women in the '70s, and she sort of pointed at me and was like, "Rachel is sort of who I was." So that was a really big treat.

ing up [ask] who's on the side of right? I think that will come to a head in the finale, and I think you'll see the Alphas questioning what they're doing.

It's interesting how vulnerable your character is when she's using her ability.

Yeah, every ability has its downside, and that's why I think the fans have gotten really bananas over the show. I think it's because they're so human. They're not invincible. When she uses her sight, she's essentially blind. When she uses her super-hearing, she's essentially deaf. Monday night is a big episode for Rachel. It kind of showcases [my character] and what she's going through and how she's so easily affected by her abilities and everything affects her to an extreme degree.

It's a dog's life for Rolling Stone contest winners

► Previously unsigned band out of Canada win record deal and cover story on legendary rock magazine ► Why The Sheepdogs are not rock-star divas

You may not have heard of them yet, but you will. The Sheepdogs — four burly, hirsute men from Saskatchewan — are the winners of Rolling Stone magazine's first "Do You Wanna Be a Rock & Roll Star?" contest, making them the first unsigned band to ever land a cover story in the magazine. Also part of their prize: a recording contract with Atlantic Records. How's that for a rags-to-riches story?

"It's all still pretty surreal to us," bassist Ryan Gullen says. "It's like one of those things where you get your photo taken and they put it on the cover of a magazine for you, one of those fake photo booths, but it's real."

Since their fan-voted victory, which came after a performance at Bonnaroo Music Festival in June, the bluesy rock group with a

What's in a name?

How did the band come up with the name?

"There's no real rhyme or reason," says Hanson. "People are like, 'Oh, you guys look like sheepdogs, you're all scruffy and hairy.' [But] it has nothing to do with that. Just a coincidence."

'70s vibe has sped up to live life in the fast lane.

"I'm not really sure how much sleep I got last night because I can't remember when I went to bed," says drummer Sam Corbett. "Then we got up and we had to go to 'Jimmy Fallon' — we woke up like literally 10 minutes before we had to go down there."

The band came together in 2005, sharing a love for Kings of Leon. And now, despite the recent drama that forced the Kings to cancel their U.S. dates, The Sheepdogs are gearing up to tour Canada with them this fall.

"I really hope those guys pull together," says guitarist Leot Hanson. "We've been together for six years and we've had our ups and downs, but in the end you are brothers and you've got to work through it. Let's just hope that they do that, because there's lots of people that'd be disappointed in Canada if they didn't tour."

And even though The Sheepdogs are on the brink of celebrity, Hanson promises they won't become divas.

"We always have been humble dudes and always will be," he says. "We don't have all green M&Ms or bulls—like that [on our rider]. It's all just like beer and towels and f—ing cheese and crackers: nothing fancy. We're not really rock stars. We don't consider ourselves to be and we won't fall into that kind of lifestyle."

Qualifications: No four-year degree required

► A bachelor's degree opens numerous doors, but there will continue to be opportunities for those without one

A traditional four-year degree puts up some enticing numbers: According to statistics from the U.S. Department of Education, in 2008, young adults with bachelor's degrees were less likely to be unemployed than those with high school diplomas, while they earned 28 percent more than their peers with associate's degrees.

However, according to "Top 100 Careers Without a Four-Year Degree" co-author Laurence Shatkin — who, it should be noted, pursued a Ph.D. — there are still stable fields for those with less formal education and training.

Health care

While he notes that a four-year degree is still the preferred route for registered nurses, Shatkin identifies ultrasound technicians, medical office assistants and home health care aides as just a few of the positions that require less training and will be in demand. "It's not so much that they're new careers, but the workforce has expanded," ► Technicians and assistants are an increasingly large part of the expanding — and expensive — health care system.

he says. "It's partly that the population is getting older, and partly that there's new technology and people who will be covered by that. In an attempt to reduce costs, there's been a shift in responsibilities to lower-paid workers."

Alternative energy

As "green" becomes mainstream, there will be a need for workers at every education level in alternative energy fields. "Every Wal-Mart that gets built now has a green roof," points out Shatkin, who predicts more opportunities in solar and wind power, hybrid cars and energy auditing.

Skilled labor

While some jobs will continue to be outsourced, others, by design, will have to stay right here in the U.S. "There is always going to be a need for skilled workers such as plumbers, electricians and construction workers. You can't ship these careers overseas — you need to have them here," says Shatkin.

Think before you hit send

- Don't let your thumbs get in the way of your promising career
- Expert e-mail etiquette tips

In the age of automatic spell-check, it's tempting to thumb out double-time memos with no regard for the art of spelling. Still, career counselors warn, your lack of SMS manners could cost you. "People are losing the art of putting together a complete couple of sentences," says career coach Sue Thompson. "You need to consider to whom are you writing."

"It's all about building rapport," agrees Shirin Khamisa, founder of Careers By Design. If you receive snappish replies to your e-mails, then you might, she suggests, keep your correspondence curt. "But if it's a person who has a more personal touch, then I would reciprocate," she adds. "Those niceties are very important in build-

Keep it clear

Don't get so lost in digital decorum that you never get to the point, Khamisa cautions.

"Keep those in the top of the e-mail so they don't get lost," she advises. "Put them in the subject line. Present things the way you'd want them presented to you."

ing relationships, even online — and especially online — because we need that glue to hold us together."

Older workers, Thompson notes, can be made uncomfortable by an overload of Web 3.0 abbreviations. "Baby boomers are going to expect a fairly concise, but formal e-mail," she says.

Above all, keep the golden manners rule in mind: "Just respect the person to whom you're writing," says Thompson. "That's what etiquette is."

The kids are all right

► It's easy to complain about their MTV-era attention spans ► But despite popular opinion, there's evidence today's students are as engaged as ever

It's likely that 2011's batch of freshmen will be greeted by some professors who have a pretty low opinion of today's students.

The common view is that students are much less prepared for college today, that standards are far lower and that freshmen have a shorter attention span each year.

Sound familiar?

But, according to Brent Bell, a researcher at the University of New Hampshire, students shouldn't take their professor's condemnations too seriously, because: Professors have almost always felt this way, and it simply isn't true.

Bell recently authored "What Do You Expect From Millennials?" in the Journal of College Orientation and Transition, in which he takes this prevailing view head-on.

"My first year of teaching, I was shocked at how poorly my students were writing; but then I had the experience of finding my old papers from undergrad. I realized that I had improved dramatically over a period of time, but had remembered myself as a much better writer," he explains. "For teachers, it truly feels like the students are much less prepared. But I found that this sentiment was pretty consistent right back to the early 1900s."

Ultimately, after the initial typically rough first semester, Bell found that today's college students are doing about the same quality of work — and maybe even better — than their predecessors. "The best criticism of that is grade inflation — students aren't held to the same standards," he says. "But if you look at the SAT over the years, the scores have stayed pretty much the same — and that's with far more students taking the test."

► If you guys text during a lecture, we're taking back all the nice things we just said.

The tough transition

Bell does remain concerned about the freshman transition. Dropout rates are highest during the first year of college.

"What I'm finding is that getting students to trust each other, build [a] community and have honest conversations with each other is what really adds to their educational experience," he explains. "The transition is much smoother for students who have an opportunity to do that."

Last-minute ways to trim college costs

► It's probably settled in by now: Degrees don't come cheap ► How to save when every little bit helps

The average private-school tuition tops $21,000, and many schools ask for more than $40,000 annually, according to Department of Education figures that don't even include room and board, pizza, iPads, colorful bedding or spring break trips.

Here are some last-minute guerrilla techniques for lining up cash for class.

Start small: High-school seniors may not want to spend their first year commuting to the local community college, but when you show them the money, they may reconsider. That's what Brian Fricke and his wife Annette did when their two sons approached the college decision. "We sat them down and said, 'Between the two of you, you're going to save us $60,000 by starting at community college. Down the road, we'll be in a better position to help you out with a down payment on a house or funding a business or whatever.'"

Deconstruct the aid offer: Look at the package your child was offered. Some of it may be in the form of subsidized loans, some of it unsubsidized loans, some of it pricier private loans and some of it grants and work-study. Take the grants and think carefully about whether the loans are your best deal; you are allowed to ► Read the fine print on your financial aid package, and consider borrowing from family or other outside sources.

Expert tip

Hit up the extended family.

Is grandma suffering with bank CDs that are paying 1 percent or less in interest while you shell out 7.9 percent for PLUS (parent loan for undergraduate student) loans? Ahem, you might be able to work out a private loan deal. Just make sure you can really keep up the payments. If grandparents actually want to help pay for college, they can send their checks directly to the school and not have it count against the annual gift-tax exclusion.

pick and choose what you want out of the package. If your family's financial situation has changed for the worse, you can go back to the financial aid office and ask for more money.

Pay as you go for extras: The aid package is usually designed to cover all of the costs of a year, including transportation, a computer, food and the like. Don't borrow for all of those add-ons, says Howard Freedman, a private financial-aid adviser in Stoughton, Mass. You can probably pay for them out of current income or short-term borrowing on a credit card.

REUTERS

Borrow elsewhere

Private college loans (and even some unsubsidized federal loans) aren't such a great deal, and you may have a cheaper and better source of money. Brian Martin, a wealth manager, tells his clients to consider borrowing from cash-value life-insurance policies, home equity lines or even a 401(k). Rates can be far lower than they are for private college loans. When you borrow from your own 401(k), you are really paying that interest back to yourself. The interest on a home equity line of credit can be tax-deductible.

Heed a call to disarm

Aug. 9 marks the commemoration of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Sixty-six years is enough! Keeping such weapons on high alert creates unacceptable risks. In this time of budget crisis, it is unthinkable that we continue to find funding for these weapons while cutting essential programs that support our nation. Desmond Tutu wrote: "Nuclear arms are wicked regardless of who possesses them. So long as these weapons exist, the threat of their use either by accident or through an act of sheer madness will remain." Eliminating all nuclear weapons is the best way to secure a safe and healthy future.

MICHEL H NAZAIRE, BROOKLYN

Two's company, three's a crowd

Our founding fathers were against declaring political parties and receiving pay for public service. We made short work of such idealism. But we did agree on one thing concerning political parties: of all the options, the two-party system was the most efficient. The "Tea Party" label infers that it is a legitimate political party, which it is not. I suggest we rename the Tea Party the "Tea Baggers" since they seem to come to life in hot water. It's all in semantics.

KEN BONACCI, VIA E-MAIL

RE: Goodbye & good riddance

I am a believer of small government, which is why I think that disqualifies me as a Democrat; I identify as an independent. The problem with Tea Partiers is that they do not believe in small government. They pick and choose when they want government to be small and when they want to control the lives and rights of the American people. For example: a woman and her vagina.

ALICIA PEREZ, VIA E-MAIL

A matter of priorities

A polar bear in Norway kills one British tourist and badly mauls four others; It is promptly killed. After the attack in an inaccessible area of the Arctic circle, a helicopter was sent immediately to reach the victims. Two weeks ago, one man murdered 77 people in Oslo, and he might get 21 years in prison. That's less than four months for each life that he took. It's a pity that the attacker in Oslo wasn't a polar bear!

Looking for a Prince

► Giants first-round pick injured
► Amukamara out 8-10 weeks with broken foot, surgery needed ► Adds to ever growing short-handed roster

As quickly as the Prince was given to the Giants, he was taken away even faster. Rookie cornerback Prince Amukamara was the last of the first-round picks to sign his deal and as long his holdout lasted, the former Nebraska star's maiden campaign was taken away just as quickly. Amukamara injured his left foot in Saturday's practice just one play into his first training camp. He suffered a fracture of the fifth metatarsal bone and will need to undergo surgery to have a screw inserted. There is no timetable for his return.

Head coach Tom Coughlin said he was "shocked" when first told of the severity of Amukamara's injury and added he doesn't believe it had anything to do with Amukamara's lengthy absence.

"I have no idea how [the injury happened]," Coughlin said, adding the Giants have some experience dealing with foot injuries. "It's shocking and it's most difficult but we've done this before."

Tackle Will Beatty suffered a foot fracture last season and missed 10 weeks.

'Tight' spot

Ben Patrick, who signed with the Giants last week, announced his retirement days later. Coupled with the departure of Kevin Boss, that leaves few options at tight end:

► Travis Beckum

Thought of as more of a receiver than blocker, and in just his second season.

► Bear Pascoe

He can block, but he played mostly fullback last year. He might need to move to TE.

Amukamara said it initially didn't feel serious. He participated in another play, until his foot gave out and he could barely stand.

"I was in press coverage and the receiver just stopped and I stopped with him, and when I just came out of the cut [knew something was wrong]," Amukamara said. "It was just one of those random injuries. I'm really down on myself. I feel like I let the team down and myself down."

TONY WILLIAMS
sports@metro.us

► This is as close as Giants fans will get to seeing Amukamara don a jersey anytime soon.

Dealing with distraction

► Coughlin

What the Giants have lacked in free agency sizzle, they certainly haven't lacked in drama.

Whether it's the shocking cuts of beloved veterans, the Ahmad Bradshaw negotiations, the defection of Kevin Boss, the Osi Umenyiora saga, or now the loss of first pick Prince Amukamara, the stories are never-ending.

But as usual, head coach Tom Coughlin isn't allowing his team to feel pity. He simply shrugs and tells his team to do a better job of adapting.

"We're always going to juggle, [because] we have other issues here and there," Coughlin said. "But we still have to keep some kind of balance so we can go ahead continue to practice like we want." ● METRO/TW

Long road back for Leonhard is finally nearing conclusion

It's been a long, frustrating recovery for Jets safety Jim Leonhard, who is just now beginning to get a sniff of the field following the season-ending leg injury he suffered last December.

For Leonhard, it was the Grinch who stole his NFL season. The loss of the veteran, called by head coach Rex Ryan "the quarterback of our secondary," was a big blow to the defense.

Leonhard has gone from struggling to get himself to his seat in front of his locker to now standing on the sidelines and following the defense through the opening days of training camp. The team's medical staff is still keeping his participation low key.

Leonhard's rehab was grueling, but the staff was surprised how quickly he recovered.

"I tried to get in there as consistently as possible," Leonhard said about his rehab. "If I could get in there every day, I got in there every day." ● KRISTIAN DYER ► Leonhard is back healthy after breaking his leg in practice before Week 13 last season.

Good day, bad day

Good day

The Patriots have signed former Jets DE Shaun Ellis.

The hulking line-man was offered a one-year contract by the Jets at the veteran minimum, but chose to sign a one-year deal with the Jets' top rival.

Ellis has played 11 seasons in the NFL, all with the Jets.

Bad day

Rex Ryan wasn't exactly enthusiastic to hear the news of Shaun Ellis' signing.

"The fact that he chose them ... there's no way I'm going to wish him well," Ryan said. "There's no chance of that."

Ryan was, however, quick to say he looked forward to facing him.

Same old story: Reyes, Murphy newest Mets added to injury list

► Murphy

The quest to get over .500 was overshadowed by an unwelcome, but familiar, visitor: injuries.

Jose Reyes and Daniel Murphy left Sunday's 6-5 loss to the Braves with leg injuries that will almost certainly keep them out of the lineup for today's start of a four-game series against San Diego, if not longer.

General Manager Sandy Alderson told reporters in an impromptu press conference outside the Mets clubhouse that Reyes suffered "a mild pull of his left hamstring," while Murphy's knee "was very definitely involved," on a play in the top of the seventh in which Atlanta's Jose Constanza spiked the Mets' infielder at second base. Replays showed that Murphy's knee buckled and he had to be helped off the field.

Murphy underwent an X-ray at Citi Field "that was negative for any fractures," according to Alderson. Murphy, like Reyes, was sent to the Hospital for Special Surgery for an MRI. Neither player was available for comment after the game.

"I was sick to my stomach for Murph," Collins said.

The losses of Reyes and Murphy complete a four-day stretch in which the Mets learned Johan Santana and Ike Davis won't be in uniform anytime soon.

● DENIS GORMAN

MLB. Yankees

► Posada has two RBI since the All-Star break.

Posada hits the bench

DH Jorge Posada wasn't in the lineup last night against the Red Sox and will reportedly share DH duties — hitting only against lefties — if he's in the lineup at all. Last night's game ended too late for press.
